

The Wellness Benefits of The Great Outdoors

Description

With winter upon us, we're all staying indoors much more often than we were before. With everyone remaining safe and cautious as a result of COVID-19, and the added element of colder weather, this is definitely going to be the season of staying home.

But is that really the best thing for us? Of course, we all want to stay safe and healthy, but what will the effects of such a lifestyle be on our mental wellness and well-being? We will always need fresh air and outdoor experiences, as they are crucial to maintaining a well-balanced life.

Luckily there are a great number of outdoor experiences and wellness opportunities at The reserve in Rhode Island. With everything from outdoor hikes to the soon-to-open OH!Spa at The Preserve, there are several of ways to make sure you keep your mental wellness in good spirits.

Mind & Body & Outdoors

It all comes down to the inseparability of mind and body. You can't necessarily have the complete health of one without the other. Even with the absence of illness, things like stress and a negative mindset can get in the way of us feeling our very best.

This is where the outdoors come in. Many people find that when they're outdoors, experiencing nature, and getting fresh air, they experience a sense of calmness, relaxation, and a deeper sense of focus during and afterward.

This is no coincidence. The benefits of an outdoor escape on mental wellness are well documented. The experience of taking in what you see, hear, and feel in nature will undoubtedly improve your mood and sense of well-being.

The change of scenery is sometimes all that is needed for a complete transformation that brings us back into life. Oftentimes, the things that have been weighing us down in life, be it work, relationships, or other daunting responsibilities, are intrinsically tied to our environment. Changing things up can instantly put us in a different headspace, and a better mood.

Beyond simply helping you feel good, there are a number of brain benefits as well for a great outdoor experience. Being outdoors can help you regain your sense of vitality or focus, as well as help, improve your sense of creativity. There's something about simply getting lost in the woods, with all the natural life surrounding you that can stimulate new ideas and refocus your thoughts.

When it comes to the outdoor activities themselves, there's really no limit on what you can choose to do. Everything from hiking, to mountain biking or hunting, are all great ways to get outside and reap the benefits of a good outdoor adventure.

OH! Spa at The Preserve

When you're all done with your outdoor adventure, the question becomes how to continue the benefits, and continue to rejuvenate your mind and body?

The answer lies in following up your outdoor adventure with a relaxing spa treatment. The outdoor adventure does wonders for your mind and thought process, which contributes greatly to your overall well-being, but your body itself might still be holding stress anxiety. These issues might manifest themselves in a number of different ways, but most commonly show up as muscle inflammation, soreness, tightness in joints, or back pain.

This is where spa treatments come into their own. The simple treatments and amenities that come from a spa day such as massage therapy, hydrotherapy, facials, aromatherapy, and many others can relax the body in ways you could only imagine, releasing tension and improving your state of mind.

The benefits don't stop at the physical either. Spa treatment has a massive effect on promoting mental relaxation, relieving anxiety, and getting you back into a proper headspace.
